The first 4 games are practice games against the opposite conference. They do not count in your team's overall record. In practice games, teams bat the entire roster, free substitution, and every player must play 4 defensive innings in the field (unless a game is halted early due to weather, or the bottom half of the 6th inning is not played because the home team is already ahead).

The remaining 8 games are regular season games. Every player must play 3 defensive innings and get at least one at-bat per game.

For all games, players must start at least every other game, except for disciplinary reasons.

The first 4 games are practice games against the opposite conference. They do not count in your team's overall record. In practice games, teams bat the entire roster, free substitution, and every player must play 4 defensive innings in the field (unless a game is halted early due to weather, or the bottom half of the 6th inning is not played because the home team is already ahead).

The remaining 8 games are regular season games. Every player must play 3 defensive innings and get at least one at-bat per game.

For all games, players must start at least every other game, except for disciplinary reasons.
